Free showing of feature film, "Disturbia"

Student Union Activities (SUA) is hosting an advance screening of "Disturbia" at the University of Kansas on April 7 in the Kansas Union Woodruff Auditorium. DreamWorks pictures selected the University of Kansas for one of its college screener locations across the country. The film is released nationwide on April 13.

"Advance screenings are a great opportunity for students to see a movie they'd otherwise have to pay $8 to see," said Amanda Hallier, SUA Films Coordinator.

The advance screening begins at 7pm on Saturday, April 7, and students must have passes to attend the showing. Passes are available in the Union Programs ticket office in the Kansas Union or students may also print off passes at www.uberduzi.com.

The following is the movie synopsis:

"After his father's death, Kale Brecht, played by Shia LaBeouf, becomes sullen, withdrawn, and troubled -- so much so that he finds himself under a court-ordered sentence of house arrest. His mother, Julie, played by Carrie-Anne Moss, works night and day to support herself and her son, only to be met with indifference and lethargy. The walls of his house begin to close in on Kale. He becomes a voyeur as his interests turn outside the windows of his suburban home towards those of his neighbors, one of which Kale begins to suspect is a serial killer. But, are his suspicions merely the product of cabin fever and his overactive imagination?"
